

Greetings from Tulcea, Romania! Happy Eco Days and all the best for us and our Earth!

The 2010 WWDay was celebrated by the students in a village called Nufaru/ Malcoci (in English it means water lily).

Their relatives have most of their lives related by wetlands, because they live in the Danube Delta Biosphere.

The message of Ramsar's Organisation was very easy to understand and so beautiful suggested by the posters and the logo you have sent.

I think that this generation is prepared for responsible life and long term projects, but the lack of will comes from upper institutions. Teachers and students are in the first line of helping nature activities. Maybe it's a necessary beginning.

Here are some photos. The kids and their teacher, Vasilica Pavel, are sending their friendship to all Ramsar's volunteers.
